French fur traders bartered the Type 'D' trade gun as early as 1730. Simple, sturdy, in many variations, the Type 'D' fusil was the standard trade gun until the French were ejected from Canada by the British in 1763, after the French and Indian War.

Our Type 'D' kit is based on the most popular of the variations known. We offer traditional iron and fancy brass trim. Oddly, the Type 'D' was not made with matching finials on the triggerguard and buttplate.

We do not yet know the French name for this trade fusil. It was designated as the Type 'D' by T. M. Hamilton in his book Colonial Frontier Guns.
